About Tingest

The Tingest brand offers products for the home inspired by Scandinavian design heritage. The majority of the items are manufactured in Sweden in association with carefully selected skilled craftsmen and based on a commitment to natural materials, sustainability and ecology.

“For me, this is a long-standing vision: of creating and manufacturing exclusive home décor items hallmarked by design excellence, fine craftsmanship and local manufacture in Sweden”, says Alexander Lervik, the creative force behind Tingest.

About the Collection

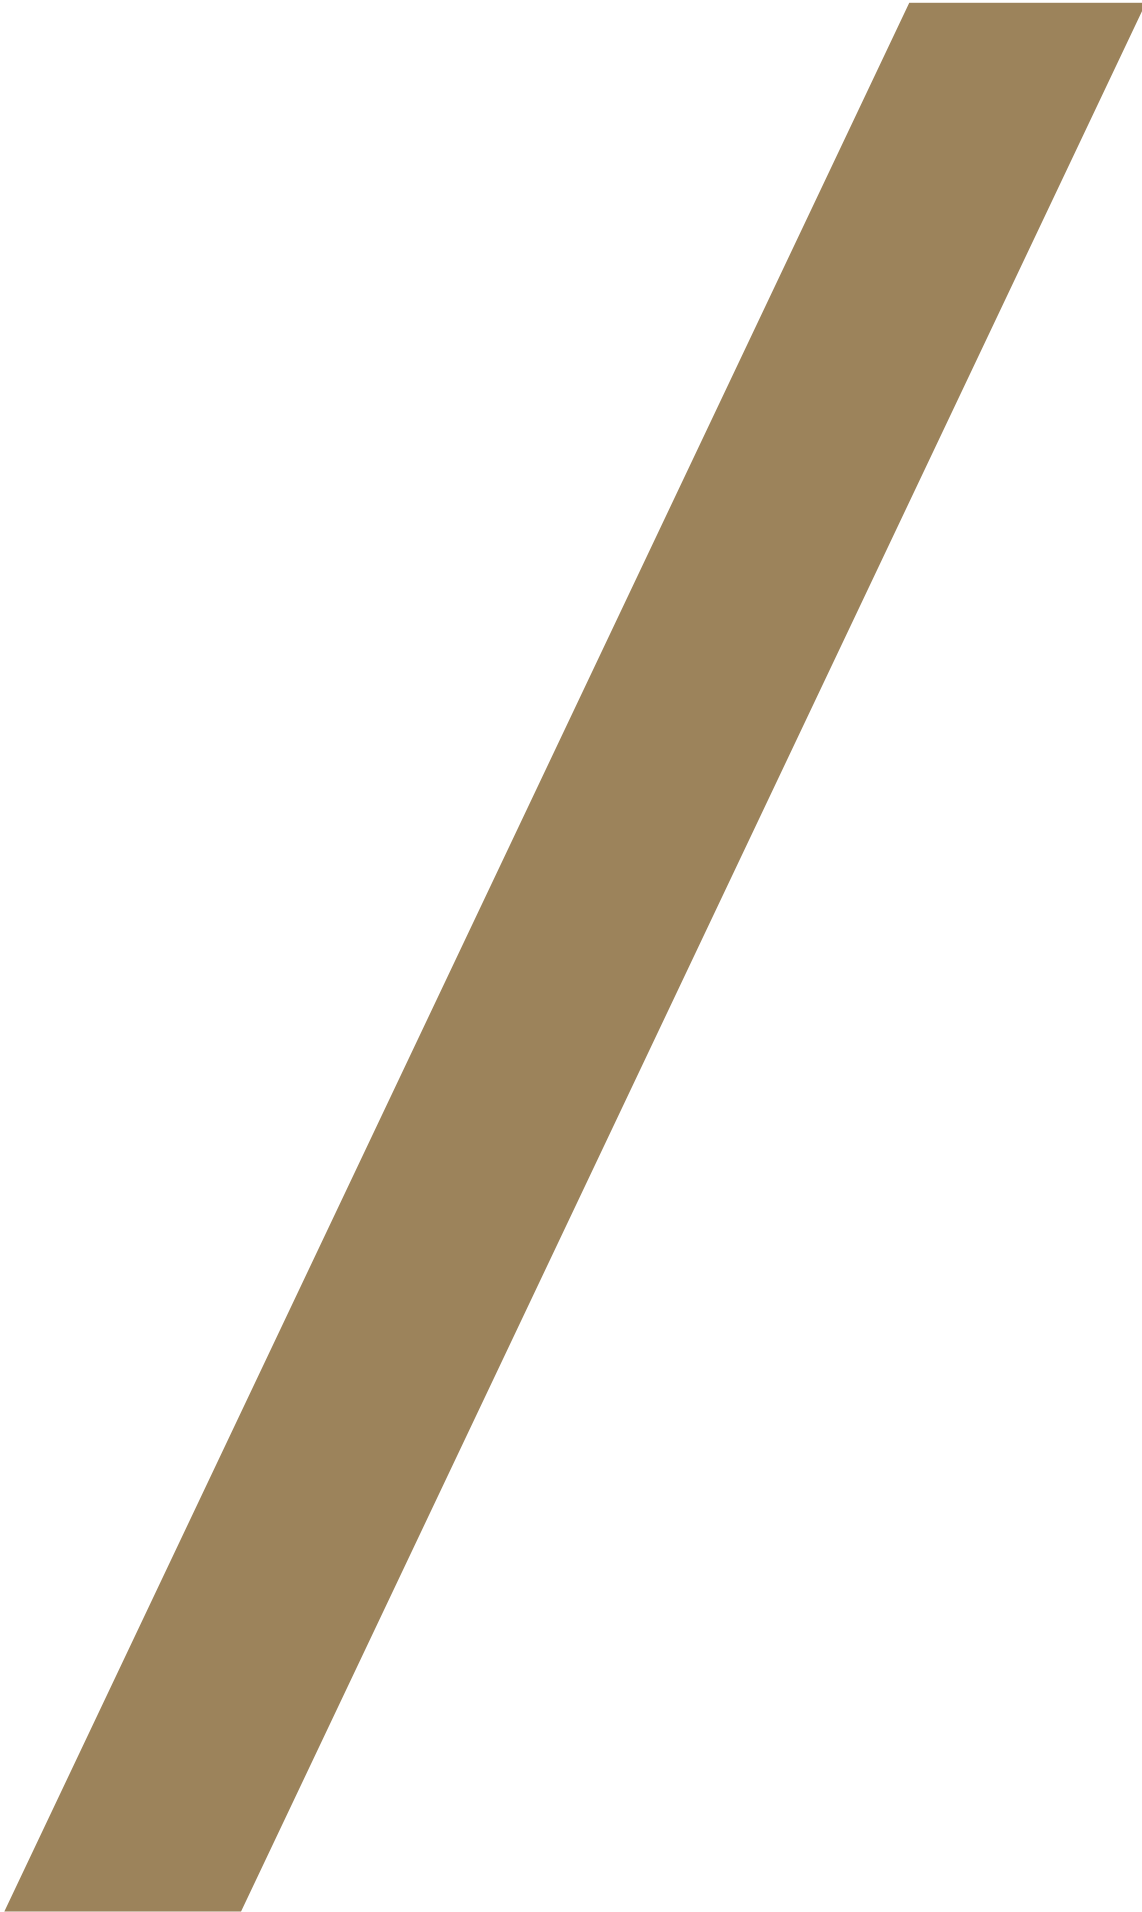

“The idea for the Tingest Collection 2016 came to me one evening at the Royal Opera House watching the ballet Swan Lake. The gauzy effect of the ballet tutus triggered my brain, giving me the idea of working in perforated media.

I sketched the raster of the tulle in the tutus in our studio as a jumping off point. The result is six very distinctive products, all with rastering as the common motif”.

“Inspired by the iconic Thonet bistro chairs, my idea was to design a contemporary variant of the café/bistro bentwood and perforated-seat chair. Drawing on the raster design, the result was a unique seat and backrest where the seating surface appears to float above the frame. Only one factory in Sweden is able to mould the state-of-the-art seat. The chair is made from powder-coated steel.”

Dimma Stool & Table

"I wanted to create a table in a minimalist construction with a light and airy feel, as if the table top is hovering in thin air. The raster effect creates both light effects and dynamism in that rainwater goes straight through it. The table is made from powder-coated steel".

“A stool inspired by bar stools in British pubs. The chunky seat is typically upholstered, but for my design I lightened it up, and used the raster to create a transparent feel for the entire stool. The stool is made from powder-coated steel”.

Mikrofon Lamp

"I often like to base my designs for lighting fixtures on shadow play. Here I wanted the raster effect in the lamp to have statement value. In this way, the pattern shines through the lampshade, casting an appealing light into the interior".

"I decided to invite artist Peter Sellberg for a collaboration on one of this years products, the end result has a reference to both nature and architecture".

"Our idea was to combine reflections of light with movement into an abstract shape. The startingpoint was a hanging mobile and it ended up as a sculptural object to hang from the ceiling, put in a shelf or at a table", says Peter.

"The sculpture is made out of a flat metal sheet that you fold together by yourself to reach the final three-dimensional shape. You can link several together to create larger unique objects", says Alexander.

“It took six years for the watch to evolve from concept to product. Along the way, there were many variants in the design, but when the theme for the 2016 collection was finalised in late 2014, the watch also found its final form. Here I tried to create a strong identity for the product by leaving the raster incomplete.

The watch features Japanese quartz movement and is available in brass, stainless steel and black plating. The Morocco leather strap comes in a range of colours”.
